

RURAL HEALTH SERVICES EXPANSION

Althing is expanding health services to larger areas of rural Minnesota and beyond. Althing Health supports more diversity, reduces costs, increases access and introduces new, highly valued services.

Rural America has steadily progressed into a health access desert where citizens have no locally available services, reduced economic resources to access distance services and increased health needs. Major medical centers, relying on outdated centralized care and revenue driven models, have proven an inability to effectively serve rural communities. When large systems locate a satellite office it typically has reduced hours, limited services, no diversity support and operates only as a feeder system to their “mother ship”.

Althing Health is different. Our model supports rural diversity, remains resident in communities, provides meaningful clinic and ‘to the home access’ and is significantly more economical. Althing is expanding now, actively providing health services to broad regions of Minnesota, serving populations from school districts through elder care in all cultures, literacies, languages and more. Our successful Portable Clinic services are rapidly being augmented with community clinic facilities. More to come...
