

RURAL HEALTH & ECONOMY LINK

A rural community with Althing Health Services is more equipped to attract and retain a diverse and engaged workforce. When the health services include sophisticated career resources, you have a novel breakthrough; you have Althing.

The future of rural America is increasingly marked by growing diversity and expanding inequity within and across regions—creating an intricate picture that binary thinking can't capture. - Brookings. The 2020 census showed that where diversity flourishes in rural America, the economy improves. However retaining and thriving in this diversity requires equitable services; it requires Althing.

Althing's breakthrough community health services also include career services. When a patient accesses portable clinic services to their home (matched to their language, literacy, age, culture, race and more) they also have access to career services that focus on local jobs and opportunities. Althing matches local populations with regional employers to create a more vibrant and sustainable service to rural communities.
